Subject: Labeling of Irradiated Foods

Dear FDA:

I know you take your charge to protect the public health very seriously, and I know you want the public's input on the question of irradiated food and its proper labeling.

I am opposed to irradiated food altogether. But if the food industry wants to do it and if some of the public wants it, far be it from me to interfere with what they want.

However, they are interfering with me if they make it difficult for me to avoid irradiated food. The only way they, and you, can respect my right to avoid this altered food, is to label it clearly so I can spend my dollars elsewhere.

Thank you for your careful consideration.
